WHEELING, W. VA., DECEMBER 4, 1882.

The Past and the Puture of the Democracy.

We talk of the Democratic party as the Bourbon party in the past: what do we mean? Napoleon defined the Bourbons of Europe to be a dynasty that was incapable of progress-that, as he put it, "never learned anything and never forgot anything." It is in this sense that Republicans have spoken of Democracy in this country ever since 1860. They said that Democracy had come to mean not the democratic principle of free and representative government—not the greatest good to the greates number, not the elevation and progress of the masses-but, instead of all this, the political and social and personal aggrandize ment of a class and an interest-the class represented at the South by slave holders and the interest represented by Democracy had its strength and lodgment for several years before the war at the South-the South was its buttressslavery was its backer, and Democracy, in its turn, was the backer of the South. To aid, abet, enhance and aggrandize the South it made all other interests subordinate. It went with the South to the very verge of the dissolution of the Union. It statesmen. opposed the war as a party-it threw great obstacles in the way of the prosecution of the war as a party; it opposed every act of the government for putting down the rebellion; its voice was for stopping the way and for negotiation, if need be, for a division of the country. As far as Democracy was concerned the war was a failure and the rebellion a success. Had Democracy pre vailed at any time during the war the war would have been a failure and the Union dissolved. What was true during the war was in like manner true after the war. We refer to these things to show why the Democratic party has been called the Bourbon party. This is the point we are illustrating. Every thing accomplished during the war and after the war in the way of progress-in the way of present results-was accomplished not only without the aid, but despite the opposition of the Democratic party. Their strength as a party was, as before the war, at the South. The head sympathized with the body and the limbs of the party. The body, the internal or-gans, the heart, the liver, the lungs, the vicera, the arteries, veins, muscles and principal bones of the system, were at the South. The head desired to rejoin itself to all this animal machinery and be the same old party again, with the same old instincts and the same old proclivities.

The South sought to again sound the slogan, to resume the old relation to the party, to ally itself to its old body and bones and muscle in the same old way again. And it would have succeeded had not the people of the North remained true to the Republican party after the war, and defeated the Democracy time after time; and we would have stood to-day as a Union and a country, in, dear knows what or how, to the logical results of the war. Here, for instance, is a part of the record of this party of Bourbonism from the outset of the war, during the war and after the war. It opposed

1. President Lincoln's proclamation in 1861 for seventy-five thousand troops to defend the National Capital.
2. President Lincoln's call for three hundred thousand troops to take the Southern forts and other property and resist rebellion.

3. The refusal to return slaves escaping into the Union lines during the war.
4. The issuance of greenbacks.
5. The establishment of our grand national banking system which strengthenour Government, made the war a success, and cave us money based or Generales.

and gave us money based on Governmen 6. The arming of negroes.

7. The emancipation proclamation. 8. The continuance of the war against 9 The overthrow of the Southern State Governments by President Johnson after ishing slavery.

1. Trumbull's civil rights bill.

12 The fourteenth amendment, which was intended to lnake the Civil Rights bill constitutional.

constitutional.

13 The overthrow of the temporary governments in the South and formation of others by the general vote of the people.

14. The payment of the public debt in waits.

14. The payment of the public debt in coin.
15. The internal revenue system.
16. The external revenue system.
17. Any and all measures for raising money, either by taxation or by loan.
18. Any inquiry as a preliminary to a revision of the tariff.
19. Any check to the Chinese imigration for a less term than twenty years.

for a less term than twenty years.
20. Any check of polygamy sovereignty in Utah.

The above is only part of the Bourbon record of the Democratic, party. We cite only twenty counts in the indictment against the party. We might cite many more. They, however, serve to illustrate a party of real progress—is not a party of the masses—is not the party that has served the Union and reconstructed it on sure and lasting foundations, and made it our point, that the Democratic party is not respected and powerful throughout the earth; is not the party that has given us a sound and uniform currency; that has ele-vated, schooled and improved the people; that has diversified their industries, opened up the earth, built railroads, given the up the earth, built railroads, given the farmer home markets, and made the whole land resound with the whirr of ma chinery and filled it with the happy homes of a great and cultivated people.

What the Democracy may do or attempt to do in the future we know not. We speak of its past. We can only judge par ties as we do individuals in this world, by their acts-their record. Possibly the Democracy have learned a good lesson; possi bly the party will be on its good behavior hereafter. It still, however, has its strong Southern affinities and proclivities. The North will watch it closely and jealously during the next two years, and if the old instincts, too strong for control, reassert themselves, and if in the future as in the past, it attempts to reverse the results of the war, it will be hurled out of power again, and ordered to again do penanc and bring forth fruits meet for repentance

GET THE BEST The Beautiful American Reprint of

Encyclopedia Britannica Or Dictionary of Arts, Sciences and General Literature.

To be completed in 21 vols. imperial 8 to., with many thousand Engravings, Maps, etc. The distinctive feature of the Harrismi is, that on all the leading subjects its attales are exhaustive treatises, and that, having it, one does not need to huy books on the sciences or subjects, as these treatises are complete works by the most talented men noted for their ability in those beauches of knowledge.

'This 'American edition is not only an exact reprint of every word and illustration of the expensive English edition—differing only in size and shape—but it is farmished in nearly half price, and will be found to be farmore portable and convenient to use than the original edition.

The 'American edition also surpasses the original edition:

The American edition also surpasses the English editions in the NUMBER OF MARS, having a map of each State and Territory in the United States. Also MUCH FULLER INDIANS IN the leading articles.
